

Occupational Health & Medical Response

+ Integrated Health Services That Keep Workers Productive

Executive Summary

Every off-site medical visit costs 3-4 hours of lost productivity. Workers' compensation costs continue rising. Regulatory compliance creates administrative burden. OnPoint's Occupational Health & Medical Response solution integrates on-site medical care, medical surveillance programs, case management, and drug testing into a comprehensive system that treats injuries immediately, reduces costs, maintains compliance, and coordinates seamlessly with your safety and project execution teams.

The Integration Advantage

Most companies contract occupational health, medical surveillance, and drug testing as separate services with little coordination. Injuries require off-site treatment. Drug test results don't feed into work authorization systems. Medical surveillance data sits disconnected from permit-to-work decisions.

OnPoint integrates health services across your workforce management system where:

- On-site nurses coordinate directly with safety advisors for immediate injury response, modified duty placement, and return-to-work planning
- Drug testing results flow directly into safety clearance systems eliminating administrative delays between testing and work authorization
- Medical surveillance data informs permit-to-work decisions ensuring workers are medically cleared for all high-risk work activities
- Occupational health surveillance works with industrial hygiene monitoring to ensure proper worker clearances based on real exposure data

Result

Workers stay on-site and productive. Health data flows seamlessly into safety systems. Compliance happens automatically without administrative burden.

Strategic Business Outcomes

Keep Workers On-Site and Productive

Every off-site medical visit costs 3-4 hours: travel time, waiting room, treatment, return trip. On-site occupational health clinics with licensed nurses treat most workplace injuries immediately without leaving your facility. 60-70% reduction in off-site visits translates directly to thousands of hours of recovered productivity annually.

Reduce Total Workers' Compensation Costs

Immediate on-site treatment reduces injury severity before conditions worsen. Early intervention and aggressive case management reduce claim costs by 15-25%. Modified duty programs coordinated between health professionals and safety advisors get workers back to productive work 25-30% faster. Lower TRIR and DART rates mean better insurance rates and less regulatory scrutiny.

Maintain Compliance Without Administrative Burden

OSHA medical surveillance, hearing conservation, respiratory protection, and drug testing programs all require expert management and meticulous recordkeeping. Our integrated approach handles all compliance requirements with coordinated documentation that keeps you audit-ready. From pre-employment screening through annual medical surveillance to incident response, compliance happens automatically.
